FATAL ATTRACTION TO KILLS MASSACHUSETTS

Pretty adventurer bombarded by tons of rocks from eruption of Krakatoa!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

A passion for smoky, sulphur-tipped volcanoes was a fatal attraction that lured snuggling Kelly Stephens to faraway Indonesia — and to her death.

Kelly and other climbers were heading back down from the crater of Krakatoa when it erupted, bombarding them with rocks, hot ash and molten lava. Kelly died from her injuries.

"I'm glad she spent the last day of her life in the outdoors on a beautiful sunny day in an exotic part of the world she loved so much," said her heartbroken sister Laurie.

Kelly, 27, loved everything about the outdoors. She camped, scuba dived, sailed and risked her life rafting on the white-water rapids. But her passion was exploring volcanoes.

"The volcanoes of Indonesia were a magnet that drew Kelly away from the safety of a quiet life-style in Massachusetts," said a close friend.

"Kelly didn't give a second thought to the danger, or if she did, she kept it to herself."

Her tragic death and injuries to the other climbers were blamed on wrong information they received before ascending Krakatoa.

They were told the mountain hadn't erupted for 200 months and they were led to believe all the activity had occurred on the western side.

Based on this misinformation, the party decided to climb only on the southeast side.

Survivor Ronald Lilley III told what it was like when the mountain erupted.

"The whole earth trembled and all this rock and hot ash and smoke went gushing into the air and fell on the southeast side. That was everywhere, and the hot lava was coming down."

Everyone in the party was burned and injured, but Kelly was hurt the worst.

"She was calm. She had asked for water, was totally rational and lucid. But suddenly, without any warning, she passed away," said Kelly's grief-stricken dad.

A PASSION for volcanoes drew Kelly Stephens from a quiet life in Massachusetts to her death in Indonesia.

Political wisecrack sparks barbershop brawl

Eight hotheaded barbers got into a violent argument about politics, then took out their scissors — and started cutting each other's hair off!

"By the time they were through, they'd snipped each other nearly bald," shrieked cop Jorge Aparos told reporters in Rio Cuarto, Argentina. "It was absolutely the weirdest thing I ever saw in my life."

Aparos said the hair-raising brawl broke out when one of the barbers made a joke about a candidate in a local political race.

"The place was full of customers, but they all ran for their lives when these guys started going after each other."

TOP SECRET PHOTO PROVES HUMANS LIVED ON MARS!

MYSTERIOUS STONE FACE is shown in spectacular detail in this shot beamed back to Earth on August 30.

A secret NASA photograph proves it beyond the shadow of a doubt: The mysterious Stone Face on Mars was built by human beings who lived on the Red Planet 200,000 years ago — and later colonized Earth!

That's the word from astrophysicist [redacted] Frania, who obtained a copy of the photograph from NASA sources after the agency's Mars Observer space probe beamed it back to Earth on August 30.

Nobody in authority is willing to talk about the photo at this early date. But Dr. Frania has learned that NASA analysts have privately concluded "that far from being a natural formation as we once suspected, the stone face was almost certainly sculpted by human hands."

NASA's official report, which has been classified "Eyes Only" by NASA brass, goes on to say that "in all likelihood, the stone face was built by our own human ancestors — people who evolved and created a civilization on Mars before something happened to their environment, forcing colonists to migrate to Earth. Needless to say, this information is not for public consumption. [redacted] to handle the tedium of our astronomical activity at this time."

"This is it — this is the proof we've been waiting for," Dr. Frania, who is widely considered to be one of the world's leading space scientists, told reporters in Washington, D.C.

"The sister monument has been a mystery ever since NASA's Viking probes sent back the first fuzzy photographs in the 1970s," he continued, "but now that we have this new photograph, the mystery is solved.

"Anyone with eyes to see can appreciate the talent, skill and thinking that went into the construction of this one-mile long, 1,000-foot high stone monument.

"And it doesn't take a NASA analyst to figure out that it was built with human hands.

"The powers that be can try to keep this secret all they want. But the word is out — and I personally challenge NASA to provide us with the [redacted] immediate disclosure regarding discovery."

NASA will neither confirm nor deny the report. But spokesmen did call into question his claim that the photograph was taken on August 30 "because the Mars Observer didn't achieve orbit around the planet until August 24."

By NICK MAPH

Special report

Undaunted, Dr. Frania quoted highly placed NASA insiders as saying [redacted] that positions to published reports, the probe that was launched last September 25 "has actually been orbiting and photographing the surface of Mars since August 15."

"This is more than a cover-up, this is a conspiracy to keep Americans, and all mankind for that matter, in the dark," said Dr. Frania.

"I understand NASA's fear that a revelation like this could cause world panic. But people have a right to know where they came from and who their real ancestors are.

"The fact that this stone face was modeled after a human being and is estimated to be at least 200,000 years old proves that an extremely advanced human civilization existed on Mars before mankind even appeared on Earth.

"Estimates vary, but most scholars agree that humans first appeared on Earth between 100,000 and 200,000 years ago — which suggests that these first humans came to Earth from Mars."

What led NASA analysts to conclude that our ancestors inhabited Mars in the distant past remains a mystery at this point.

But Dr. Frania has learned that the Mars Observer also photographed an enormous, Stonehenge-like map of the solar system on the planet's surface. It is rumored that the map shows a line between Mars and Earth with something that looks like a saucer-shaped starship in between.

"NASA's own experts have speculated that a global environmental disaster destroyed the Martian atmosphere, slowly making it uninhabitable," said Dr. Frania.

"That would certainly give the humans who lived there a strong incentive to colonize another life-sustaining planet. In this case, that planet was Earth."

Minister has proof . . .

Werewolves ARE real!

MICHAEL LANDON portrayed a were-wolf in an episode of his hit TV series, Highway to Heaven.

Werewolves do exist, says a world-famous clergyman.

In fact, Rev. Donald Omand has successfully used exorcism in three incredible real life encounters with werewolves.

"In rare cases, people take on the symptoms of werewolves. They howl like wolves, have their teeth in a wolfish shape and actually grow hair on the backs of their hands and sometimes their faces.

"They are victims of devil possession but they can be cured by exorcism. I have proof from my own experiences."

Dr. Omand says that in the past he has used exorcism to cure a madman in his early 40s.

"About three years ago I was called in by a psychiatrist in a European country," said Dr. Omand, 74, an exorcist from England.

"The psychiatrist described this man's very strange behavior to me. He had previously attacked someone.

"And he was behaving like a madman, breaking up furniture in his cottage.

"When I first saw him he was making wild wolflike noises and like thick hair on his hands convinced me he was a werewolf.

"The man had extremely thick hair on the back of his hands, and it seemed to me he had more hair at night than he did during the daylight hours.

"A young doctor had diagnosed it as a case of rabies. Although the man had scratches on his leg, there was no visible sign of a bite to suggest a rabid animal might have attacked him."

The doctor had given the man drugs to control his madness, but Dr. Omand said: "I carried out a form of exorcism — the power of prayer. I could feel that he was shaking signs of recovery about halfway through the service.

"A few days later the man's hair was disappearing from his hands. Later the doctor told me it had gone away completely and the victim was leading a normal, everyday life again.

"When he recovered, he couldn't remember ever being bitten, so it certainly wasn't a case of rabies."

That wasn't the only were-wolf case Dr. Omand has handled. He also successfully used prayer on two other people who acted like werewolves.

Divers discover mountain of diamonds on ocean floor!

By TONY CASSIDY / Correspondent

Divers have stumbled across what may be the richest treasure trove the sea has ever yielded to man — an incredible underwater mountain of diamonds!

And for anyone willing to make the effort, the gems are theirs, just for the taking!

The mind-boggling discovery of the new field has sent a wave of diamond fever surging along the coast of Denmark where hunters bring up a virtual fortune in gemstones with every dive.

The Borsholm gems — each no more than a half-inch across and bringing more than $100 apiece — are hidden inside bowling ball-size calcium pods on the bottom of the icy North Sea off Nissum Fjord.

"The pods are down there in a pile that is more than 50 feet high. But it's not an easy task to get them to the surface," declared German diver Hans Hahn, who became an overnight millionaire when an earlier diamond strike was found in the Baltic Sea in 1985 by Per Salmon and Bjarne Pedersen.

"The pods are at a depth of 180 feet, which can be deadly for anyone not familiar with decompression controls or bone-numbing water temperature.

"The pods are calcium and weigh 10 to 12 pounds each. By using baskets lowered from my support ship on the surface, I can raise about 250 pods. But I am restricted in how much time I can spend below in any 24-hour period.

"But that doesn't bother me. It takes time to open the pods and extract the diamonds. Actually, that's the best part of the adventure — getting the gems. Sometimes we get as many as two dozen stones from a single pod."

Borsholm diamonds are identical to regular diamonds. Now an internationally known German firm is negotiating a pact with the Danish government to market the sea gems.

Divers Per Salmon, left, and Bjarne Pedersen show off the valuable haul they discovered in the Baltic Sea in 1984.

BRILLIANT gemstones are waiting to be harvested

New study proves it: Most space aliens are dwarfs!

Most space aliens who visit Earth are dwarfs who stand less than 4 feet tall!

So says physicist David Webb, who analyzed nearly 2,000 close encounters and found that aliens fall into three classes.

"Most numerous are those in the dwarf class," he said. "Generally, they wear helmets and metallic reflecting suits. Very often they are seen in pairs gathering samples from the ground and trees. They don't generally communicate with humans."

The second group is comprised of humanlike beings from 5 to 6 feet tall, said Dr. Webb.

"They are seen in groups of three or more and involved in the so-called abduction cases. There is often communication with humans."

In the final category are the giants that appear in at least 7 feet tall, he said.

"All of these classes of aliens tend to wear one-piece coveralls or jumpsuits that are tight-fitting all the way down to the hands," continued Dr. Webb.

"Not too many carry weapons but generally these extraterrestrials tend to control the situation.

"Sometimes a witness is paralyzed by an apparent ray gun device," he said. "But often he's just paralyzed without any obvious weapon."

Dr. Webb found that of the nearly 2,000 cases:

- 28 percent involved aliens seen entering or leaving a UFO.
- 17 percent involved aliens observed in a UFO.
- 12 percent involved an alien near a spacecraft.
- 10 percent involved seeing a space alien but not a UFO.
- 10 percent involved witnesses who actually were taken aboard a UFO.
- 7 percent involved an alien seen in the area where UFO sightings have previously occurred.
- 3 percent involved communication with the alien.

The remaining 3 percent don't fit into any categories.

Football coach orders players to have sex with his wife!

A California high school football coach gave his star quarterback some seamy advice on how to improve his game performance: "Have sex with my wife.

"You'd be doing me and yourself a favor," 16-year-old gridder A. T. Page said he was told by coach Randy Brown.

For Page, who respected and idolized coach Brown, it was advice he couldn't ignore. The teen told police he went to bed with the coach's wife Kelly about 1,000 times.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

That was back in 1986 when Page guided Hemet High School to a 8-4 record. But there is no evidence the sexual escapades at the coach's house and in the school film room made him a better quarterback.

Page was succeeded at quarterback by Marc Searl, who said he also was approached by coach Brown in September of his senior year but turned down the same sexual offer.

The sordid sexual trysts didn't come to light until Page, now 19, and Searl, 18, had graduated from high school.

That's when the two young men asked a lawyer how to change the law to protect underage boys from being coerced by dominant adults into having sex with a woman.

Page was told that intercourse was not a crime because he is a guy and not a girl.

The attorney suggested Page factor in oral copulation, which is a crime.

Brown and his attractive, blonde cuckold wife Kelly eventually pleaded guilty to ten counts of sex regulation with a minor and one count of conspiracy to commit oral copulation with a minor.

They were each given 25-year suspended sentences and $5,000 fines and placed on probation for five years.

The Browns have since moved out of California.

Page and Searl lobbied successfully in the state capital to amend California's statutory rape law to include boys as well as girls. The teens wanted to make the point that boys can be coerced by dominant adults to have sex with a woman, leaving them emotionally scarred.

COACH Randy Brown, right, pressured his star players to score on the field — and in bed with his pretty wife Kelly. The Browns have since been fired and placed on probation.

HEMET, Calif., quarterbacks Marc Searl, left, and A.T. Page lobbied successfully to change the state's statutory rape laws to include boys as well as girls.

Sleeping camper awakened by 500-lb. bear drooling on his face!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

It wasn't rain that David Semenero felt on his neck when he was jolted awake in a California campground in the dead of night — it was bear spit!

Looming over David's sleeping bag at 2:30 a.m., with saliva dripping from its mouth, was a slobbering 500-pound bear.

"I looked up and saw its teeth," the 32-year-old carpenter said with a shudder as he recalled his chilling brush with death in a wilderness area near Shasta Lake. "I could feel its breath on my face."

For a tense, gut-wrenching 15 seconds that must have seemed an eternity, David lay perfectly still, staring up at four furry legs he said "were so huge they looked like tree trunks."

Then the bear clamped its jaws around David's head, inflicting a deep, two-inch gash.

"He nailed me," David said.

Thinking it was time to change strategy, David sat bolt upright, bringing his face only inches from the bear's deadly jaws.

"I figured if I was going to get killed, I was going to attack me," David explained. Then the bear slowly lumbered off into the night.

David made a beeline to the safety of his truck. He later drove to a hospital and had his head wound sewn up. An animal expert said the

The truth about beauty marks and cancer

Beauty marks — are they harmless or early signs of skin cancer?

They can be either, says Dr Peyton Weary, a dermatology expert.

"While the majority of pigmented skin lesions are nothing to worry about, others can be the first sign of trouble," Dr. Weary said. "And few people know the difference.

"It's important to be able to recognize a mole that might be the start of melanoma — the most deadly form of skin cancer."

To help Weekly World News readers become more informed, Dr Weary answered the following questions, which he says people most often ask about these skin blemishes:

● Can a beauty mark develop into skin cancer?

"Generally, a beauty mark would be a darkly pigmented spot which has been on the skin for many years," Dr. Weary said. "It's very unusual for such a mark to become malignant."

● Should all dark-colored moles on the skin be surgically removed?

"Since 99.9 percent of dark-pigmented moles are harmless, there is no justification for the removal of all moles," Dr Weary said.

● Can you tell anything about a mole by its color?

"The color of a benign mole may vary from tan to brown to black, with many tints in between," Dr. Weary said. "But whatever the color, it should be even. Blue or black spots or increased redness are signs of possible malignancy."

● What are the signs that a mole is dangerous?

"Rapid enlargement or a rapid darkening of a mole is a primary cause for concern," Dr. Weary said. "Most moles will undergo slow changes in time, but if one should increase in size rapidly over a month or so, this would indicate the need to see if the mole should be removed."

● What other signs show a mole is turning dangerous?

"If a mole starts bleeding, it would be a signal to seek prompt medical attention," Dr Weary said. "I'd also visit a doctor if a mole became painful, produced a discharge or became ulcerated."

Inmates at Joliet Prison in Illinois flat out refused to cooperate in the shooting of a scene for the new thriller Natural Born Killers until they got a glimpse of Schiffer's superstructure.

"The film's director wanted to use the prisoners as extras in a big riot scene," says a Hollywood insider.

"But when they were told what was required of them they decided to do a bit of off set bargaining. They told the man they would be happy to do the scene ... once they had seen Dixie Cup 1 pop up in person."

The queen of the catwalk saved the day by making a guest appearance and knocking them dead.

CLOSTER Dean Martin needs a bit of rest

Dean Martin is winding down.

"I called him yesterday morning and I told him that I just wanted to ask him if he were still breathing," said Jerry.

"Dean said, 'I'm doing fine. Just going to rest.' I said it's 7:45 in the morning. 'You just got up. Why should you rest?' He said, 'When you get to be my age pal, you rest a lot.' For the record, Dino is 77 and Jerry's a decade younger.

People who grow horns

MAN with horn on his head.

Human beings can actually grow horns, medical journals report.

"It certainly does happen from time to time," declared Dr. S. George Brown, a respected psychiatrist.

A recent survey unearthed these astonishing cases:

● A 30-year-old Brooklyn [illegible] a horn that curled like a ram's from the right side of his head. He hid the growth under a hat for six years. But one day the wind blew his hat off — and horrified onlookers hounded him out of his job.

● A 32-year-old [illegible] South Africa had a horn eight inches long growing from the top of his head. It [illegible] a curved appearance.

● An 81-year-old man had a 3-in. [illegible] growing from the back of his right hand.

[illegible] people think that diseases and evils are a judgment of the gods — noted Dr. Brown, who treated the 30-year-old man.

But Dr. [illegible] president of [illegible] Medicine cites instances of horns appearing in human beings [illegible] feet, hands, chins and even eyelids. And in rare cases the incredible case of a woman who had an extra set of [illegible] horns.

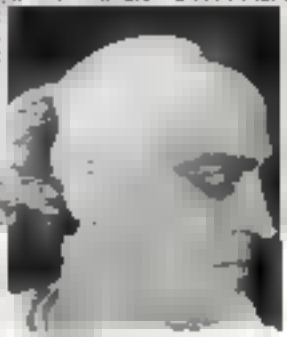
What causes these strange [illegible] Dr. Brown is the [illegible] Army Neurological [illegible] war victims on his head during a fight," according to an article documenting the case in the American Journal of Surgery.

A month later he noticed a lump in the same area, the size of a pea. So he went to his doctor who took it out.

About six months ago the growth reappeared. It began to grow very fast and became very noticeable as the patient at 49 was wont a hat. For six years his children never saw their father without a hat.

Neither did his fellow workers — until that fateful gust of wind revealed his secret.

But his case had a happy ending. Like some other victims, he had his horns removed by surgery.



INCREDIBLE Brooklyn man, with the right side of his head shaved to better show his nine-like horn.

It can happen to YOU, warn docs!

How to get everything done — [redacted] if you're lazy!

You can do less and get more done, says an expert.

Dr. Wayne Oates, author of Workaholics Make Lazyness Work for You, suggests that you

- Get rid of extra steps. Study the number of motions it takes to complete your task — you may find some of them can be cut out, and you can do the same work with less effort.
- Recognize that beyond a certain point, effort is wasted. When you get beyond the point of increasing returns, take a stress interruptive break. Relax, then suddenly the solution to the problem may occur.
- Keep in mind that some things are easier done than argued about. If someone is constantly asking you to do a pitching task and you keep saying, "I'll do it, but I can't do it now," by the time you've put it off three times, you could have had it done.
- Hire others to do what you despise — or trade off. For instance, get somebody else to weed the garden so you can do more creative things.
- Be a disappearing act. If people can't find you, they can't make you work.
- Break schedules from day to day. Don't always do things at the time you're expected to. You'll get more done on a varied schedule.
- Cut out meetings that you can skip.
- Restrict the length of meetings. Suggest that the meeting be held within a certain time span.
- Always have a perfect excuse ready for everything. If you're ingenious, there is always an excuse.
- Cut out tasks that anybody can do. Do what you alone can do and let other people do the other things.
- Let the rats win the rat race. Ask yourself if you really need to get that task done, or are you doing it just to compete with other people.

STUPID YANKEE PRANK HAS DIXIE FIGHTIN' MAD!

MY AMERICA
By ED ANGER

That hate, great Confederate General Robert E. Lee must be spinning in his grave over the latest slap at the South by Yankee troublemakers.

The thing is called an "Application To Live In The South" and this poison is being spread across America by a secret bunch of fax machines located somewhere in upstate New York — the heart of Union Territory.

My FBI sources tell me that nearly 250 million copies of this stupid jab against the South have been distributed so far — and the number is mushrooming. "If these Union dratiches are trying to fire up the Civil War again 125 years after it ended, this little 'quiz' about being Southern might do the trick," said an FBI source.

And he sure got upsidding there, boys. I'm southern and damn proud of it, and if I ever get my hands on the bluebellies who wrote this crap, they'll think the Battle of Bull Run was a Sunday picnic.

Let me know if it makes you as pig-dittiest mad as it made me! Write to Colonel Ed Anger, c/o Weekly World News, 600 S. East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

WARNING! Allergic reactions to exercise [redacted] kill you!

Some people may actually be allergic to exercise!

Top doctors are puzzled by potentially fatal, allergy-like symptoms found in a group of athletes they've studied.

The danger signs include itching, hives, swelling, choking or wheezing.

"What we have found so far is quite startling," declared Dr. Albert Sheffer. "Hard exercise is seldom injurious to well-conditioned participants.

"However, 10 athletes — aged between 16 and 32 — have come to our attention with potentially life threatening, exercise-induced symptoms.

"During or following exercise, nine of the 10 had fainting spells, some of which were associated with a dramatic drop of blood pressure as well as swelling of the face, palms or soles.

"Five of the patients also had upper respiratory tract obstructions with choking and wheezing.

"Five others had stomach upsets, with nausea and severe headaches, lasting several days. Everyone had itching, always associated with hives."

Based on his preliminary findings, Dr. Sheffer advises everyone:

"If you're jogging and you start to itch and then get hives, you'd better stop. It could be serious ... it could be fatal."

Dr. Frank Austen added:

"Anyone who experiences an adverse reaction to exercise should check with his physician.

"We're talking about people whose reactions to exercise resemble the reactions others have when we know they are allergic to a drug or an insect."

The doctors believe that in some people the chemical changes in the blood occurring during exercise touch off the reaction.

The treatment is the same as for people who are suffering other types of severe allergic reactions — including the administration of adrenaline, oxygen and medication.

FIRING SQUAD SCREW-UP!

DOOMED: Jorge Perdomo, left, and Rodrigo Cabrera endured 30 agonizing minutes of sheer hell before the firing squad finally killed them

Nearsighted soldiers take 9 tries to finish execution!

By SAM BAUER

A firing squad failed in seven attempts to execute a pair of murderers before members got lucky and nailed the victims on the eighth and ninth tries!

By the time Jorge Perdomo, 46, and Rodrigo Cabrera, 42, perished on the grounds of a federal prison west of Bogota, Colombia, authorities were actually debating whether to call the execution off -- and let the murderers free.

Prison officials were unprepared to the incident and declined to comment.

But human rights groups were outraged -- and called on authorities to "ban capital punishment once and for all."

"Capital punishment is cruel and barbaric, as this incident proves as well," declared Alfredo Vasquez Carrizosa, president of the Bogota chapter of Amnesty International.

But Perdomo and Cabrera, leaders of the notorious Medellin drug cartel, had no such qualms about ordering the murders of their enemies.

The cartel leaders' status as respected members of society had already been seriously damaged by their arrests on charges of drug trafficking and murder.

Then, on August 18, Perdomo and Cabrera were convicted of the murders of two police officers.

Because the two had been convicted of "atrocious, base and cowardly acts," the trial court ordered them executed by a firing squad.

But Colombia's Supreme Court overturned the ruling, arguing that the firing squad was too merciful.

The court ordered the two killers to be executed by hanging.

But Perdomo's attorneys appealed the ruling, arguing that hanging was unconstitutional.

The appeal caused a storm of controversy, with some officials arguing that the two should be executed by a firing squad, because they were originally sentenced to die by that method.

As a consequence, there were two executions instead of one.

Both of the firing squad victims had their hands tied behind their backs and were blindfolded. Each was strapped to a chair.

Then, at 5:30 p.m., the squad opened fire.

But the shots failed to kill the two men.

Perdomo was hit in the chest, but he remained conscious and alert.

Cabrera was hit in the head and died a few minutes later. The execution lasted 30 minutes.

Members of the firing squad were not identified for their own protection.

But Ortiz quoted prison sources as having said that in the future, members of the firing squad will be chosen more carefully.

"This was a public relations disaster," said the judge, who ordered the execution, "and it will not be repeated."

As you might suspect, most small and suspicious minds are convinced that we are sleeping together, too. Why is it that a woman and a man can't have a casual relationship without people starting trouble? – Innocent in Casaro Valley

Dear Innocent: Having lunch once or twice a month is a casual relationship — having it four to five times a week is an affair. With that in mind, it's no wonder your co-workers think you've sleeping with the boss. To be perfectly frank about it – oh, boy!

Is a high school diploma as important as they say?

Dear Dotti: I fell behind the rest of my class in high school and switched to vocational school. I'm very happy about the switch in many ways. But I can't help but feel bad because I won't be getting a high school diploma. Please advise. – Undecided Girl in Bentley

Dear Undecided: You listen to me, young lady, and you listen to me good. When you finish vocational school I want you to go to night classes and earn your high school equivalency. Then I want you to enroll in the nearest community college and get a two-year degree — at least. In this day and age a high school diploma just isn't good enough — especially if you don't want to flip hamburgers for the rest of your natural life!

My brother pokes fun at me & at your column, too!

Dear Dotti: My brother makes fun of me and calls me a boy when I'm really a girl. He even picked up my copy of Weekly World News and reads that of YOUR column just because I like to read it. I want to pay him back. Tell me what to do. – Fed Up in Cleveland

Dear Fed Up: It's perfectly normal for brothers to pick on sisters but exploiting my columns was going too far. With that in mind, I think you should spread rumors that your brother has the hots for the prettiest girl in school – and let the whole world know that he secretly plays with dolls!

Should my he-man wife start a mud-wrestling club?

Dear Dotti: My wife wants to start a women's mud-wrestling club. I happen to think that wrestling is a man's sport, even though she vehemently disagrees. Settle this once and for all. Do you think

Dear Jim: I agree with your wife 110 percent. To tell you the truth, I've been known to jump in a mud pit and wrestle myself!

MERMAID MUMMY

Incredible discovery on t myth about ancient sea

Excited angler Marsha Crillor scored the catch of a lifetime three weeks ago, when she stumbled across a tiny, dried-up sea creature — and realized she'd found a real-life mermaid mummy!

The Portland, Ore. grandmother found a 17-inch long specimen with human like head and torso and fish like lower body while she was getting in a little early morning fishing. Experts say the creature is definitely not a known species and believe it probably gave rise to the mermaid myth.

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

"We have examined the specimen at length and have concluded that it died only a few years ago after which it became mummified in the wind and sun," said Ernest Steinright, a marine biologist who is studying the find.

"Our tests show that while it lived it fed on sea plants and that it used its hands and arms much as humans do, for lifting, carrying and manipulating tools.

"This is a truly remarkable find and one of great scientific importance.

"We have reason to believe that this sea animal belongs to a living species and that a number of these creatures are alive and inhabiting the waters off the Oregon coast."

Mrs. Crillor, 63, said she was fishing near Lincoln City early one morning when she happened to spot a small object on the beach.

She investigated — and uncovered a perfectly preserved sea creature that looked exactly like a tiny mermaid.

The mummified relic has long waist length hair, fish scales on its forward tail and a human like face with closed eyes.

"I couldn't believe my eyes. I had found a mermaid, it was obvious," Mrs. Crillor said. "And everybody I showed it to thought the same thing.

"It's as hard as a rock, but it still has a slightly fishy smell. It's kind of trouble, actually."

Meteorologist said he cannot prove Mrs. Crillor's find is a mermaid, but he can't prove it isn't, either.

"There is no evidence to believe that mermaids were anatomically human also," the biologist added.

"The myth could just as well be triggered by these small creatures who were spotted spending themselves on rocks and mistakenly believed to be as large as a full size woman.

"The one specimen we do have to certainly fully formed and adult and it probably died of some natural cause.

"It died of natural causes, but we're hoping to locate living examples of the animal.

"In fact, we've alerted authorities up and down the West Coast of the United States, telling them to be on the lookout for more of these fascinating creatures."

AMAZING creature was found near Lincoln City

TESTS show the mermaid used its hands and arms much as humans do. The wrinkled relic has fish scales on its tiny tail and a human face with closed eyes.

6 ways to be more charming

Anyone can become a more charming person, says a top professional teacher of poise, self-confidence and personality.

"Charm works wonders," declared beauty expert Evelyn Kay, and here are her tips for developing your own charm:

● Pay attention to what others tell you. "Charm is the ability to put others at ease. Invest your own self-consciousness — the biggest enemy of charm — and by focusing yourself by really listening to the other person."

● Sound confident. "If you sound confident, people will believe you are. Sometimes you have to fake it and pretend you are confident."

● Look your best. "If you have an air about you that says it takes time to get you looking your best, you are complimenting the intuition of others, and they notice and appreciate it."

● Don't discuss your personal problems indiscriminately. "Everybody has their own problems and they don't really want to hear yours. Once in a while it's okay to say, 'Hey, I need to talk to you.' But don't complain constantly."

● Be grateful to people who do things for you. "Thank your mailman for bringing you the mail, for instance. Thank your employer if you've had a good day."

● Smile. "If you want to be warm and

Do you suffer from any of these strange symptoms?

You are not alone. You are not the only one who suffers from foot cramps in bed, ice-cream headaches and bumpy tongues. But you might be hesitant to ask your doctor about such little aches, pains and ailments.

So we asked several experts on medicine and dentistry to explain some of them:

● Ice-cream headache — You won't find this in any medical textbook, but it's a common malady and can hurt like the dickens.

Some authorities think the probable culprit is the cold in the ice cream which sets off pain receptors in the roof of the mouth. The pain lasts only for 10 minutes no matter what you do.

● Hiccups — A sensible search for air that's swallowed into the stomach. Belch and it goes. They are a good idea in the stomach and are not a dis-ease symptom. If you don't swallow the air there's no result and you won't hiccup.

Some people tend to swallow air and to complain of "gas" more frequently than others. Experts

● That little flutter or twitch on the cheek just below the eye — Doctors usually are not very keen on such loose definitions as a "lid twitcher." It is an irritable discharge by a nerve, causing a muscle to quiver.

● Foot cramps — In rare cases, there are pathological conditions that predispose people to muscle cramps. But most personal of the cramps that we talk about are the kind of nocturnal cramps that make people get out of bed and stomp around.

● Hiccups — A hiccup is a repeated contraction of the diaphragm on one side or the other that, in turn, causes a person to suck in air. Why does the diaphragm contract? Something is irritating a nerve, but precisely why it occurs is not known to the medical profession.

Often, it is the result of irritation or damage to the tourlike nerve cells in the inner ear. Depending on the degree of the damage or irritation, the sound will be a ringing, a hissing or a dull roar.

When it occurs infrequently and with no particular pattern, it's a sign of absolutely nothing, or of superb overdosage.

CUSS LIKE A SAILOR — IT'S GOOD FOR YOU!!

Cussing when you're angry, frustrated, disappointed or upset is good for you emotionally — and can even help keep you healthy physically, say top experts.

"A curse a day keeps the doctor away," Dr Reinhold Aman, a linguist [redacted] has studied cussing and its effects for 14 years. "If you're always playing Mr or Mrs Niceguy and never drain off your feelings of being upset, it can just eat you up."

Dr. Abraham Chaplan agreed, saying: "Cussing acts as an emotional release for a person and it does have a safety valve effect.

"In cussing you can get a lot out without really harming another person.

"As the old saying goes, 'Sticks and stones can break my bones, but words will never hurt me.'"

Both experts warn that trying to hold your anger in can lead to serious emotional and physical illness. Stomach ulcers, tension headaches, hives, depression, neurosis, madness and even heart attacks.

"Non-released hostility or non-released frustration is harmful psychologically as well as physically," said Dr. Aman.

"Pent up anger leads to feelings of frustration and causes the stomach to produce excess hydrochloric acid," he said.

"Just as a vessel can blow off its steam into safety valves and pipes, people can blow off their 'steam' in safe ways. One is swearing.

"It's a release, and any kind of release brings the body and mind back to its normal condition."

Dr. Aman noted swearing is also a lot safer than losing control of yourself in a violent fight.

"Instead of letting go and terrorizing physically aggressive, hit your opponent with words," he advised.

"Words are just as good a weapon as physical blows — but they're much more civilized," he concluded.

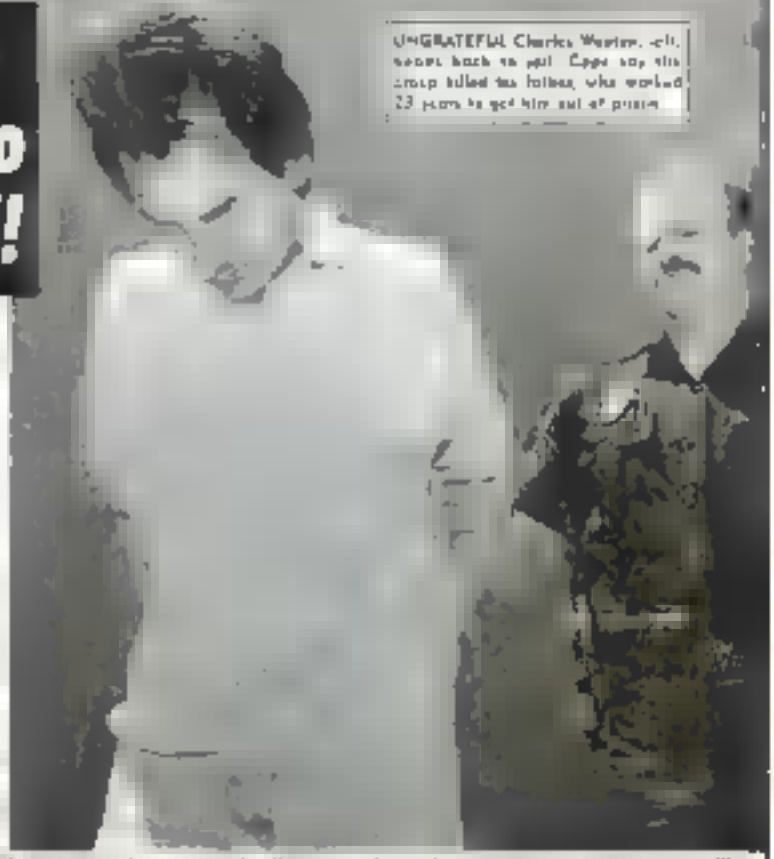
THE MEANEST MAN ALIVE!

Son kills dad who worked 23 years to get him out of jail!



UNGRATEFUL Charles Wooten, left, seems back to jail. Cops say the creep killed his father, who worked 23 years to get him out of prison.

By JACK ALEXANDER

Convicted killer Charles Wooten was finally freed from prison because of his loving dad's tireless efforts for 23 heartbreaking years.

But the ingrate Wooten repaid his faithful father, Arlis Wooten, with a bullet, and then hatched and chopped up the body to hide any evidence of the heartless act, cops say.

"He did never gave up trying to get his son out of prison," said a detective in the tiny town of Azle, Texas. He went to every parole board hearing and bombarded the board with letters for 23 years."

KIDNAPPED Arlis Wooten was killed by the son he loved, cops say.

Wooten, 64, served those 23 years of life sentences of two gas station robberies. He was finally released from prison in May 1990.

The 63-year-old dad was shot to death during a violent argument in his son's small apartment.

Days elapsed in Azle, a suburb [illegible] of Fort Worth, cops said [illegible] looking for Wooten.

With the help of another [illegible] Wooten took the body [illegible] and identify the charred [illegible] a police spokesman.

Egyptian teens arrested for [illegible] on pyramids!

The newest trend for hoodlum teens in Egypt is to sneak to the top of ancient pyramids — and ride their skateboards down the sides!

The dangerous stunt has landed at least 50 kids in jail and dozens more in hospitals.

"We will not allow this practice to continue," policeman Shakif Mahi told reporters. "These pyramids are monuments to our Egyptian heritage and cannot be treated with such disrespect."

Making the stunt even more dangerous is the fact that [illegible]

An incredible 73 percent of top scientists polled now believe in UFOs — and more than half want the government to fund investigations into them.

Not only that, but a startling 32 percent of these scientists are convinced that they had seen UFOs themselves.

"What is most striking is the huge number — 3 out of 4 [illegible] scientists are prepared to answer definitely not' to the question of whether UFOs actually exist. That result is identical to what we had in 1981."

PORTRAIT OF DEATH!

Drunk driver must carry beautiful victim's photo for five years!

By R. MIKE LIND / Correspondent

A judge wants to make sure drunk driver Thomas Browne doesn't forget about the woman he killed in a car accident — so he's ordered the man to carry a picture of her for the next five years!

HE'LL NEVER FORGET: Thomas Browne.

Browne must also give talks on drunk driving at schools and civic organizations and display a portrait-size picture of the victim.

"I want him to look at that woman's face every day and realize what he's done," said Circuit Judge Lee Haddock, who ordered the unusual sentence for four years probation in Jacksonville, Fla.

"And I want the members of the various organizations where he speaks to see this beautiful young woman and know she's gone — and why."

TRAGIC: Cyndi Fister.

Browne, 34, was convicted of manslaughter after he got drunk and lost control of the car in which he and close friend Terry Fister were riding last December 20 on Interstate 295.

Miss Fister, 24, was thrown from the car and killed.

Browne had been driving with a blood alcohol level of 0.13. The legal limit in Florida is 0.10 percent.

Miss Fister's mother, Ann, what you did that night and why Terry's gone.

"Don't you ever live another day without thinking about our precious Terry and what you did to her."

Prosecutor Lance Day suggested the unusual sentence but says it wouldn't be the right one for every drunk driver.

"I recommended that Browne serve this special probation instead of going to prison," says Day.

"In the first place, Browne is extremely remorseful. He and the victim were close friends and jail won't make him sorrier than he already is. And he's also intelligent and articulate. He's of more value in society speaking to civic organizations than he would be in prison."

Judge Haddock adds, "I wanted people to see Browne speak because he's a normal 'solid citizen.'

"Teens today believe that drunk drivers are sleazy, low-life crooks with criminal records as long as their arms. I want people to realize that these tragedies can happen to Great recipes from beyond the grave!

Michigan gal uses Ouija board to get delicious dishes from dead chefs!

By BEATRICE DEXTER

Mary Van Maastricht's new recipes are out of this world, and there's a good reason why: She gets them from her Ouija board!

The Detroit homemaker says her pure-morning pecan buttermilk bread and other scrumptious recipes come from great cooks who have passed many — and they're not mind their secrets by spelling them out on the ghost board.

"I guess it's a little eerie, all right," said Mrs. Van Maastricht, 67. "If I'm stuck for a dinner idea I just get out the board. My kids and my husband go wild over my cooking now. I don't know what I'd do without my Ouija board."

The happy housewife says she first discovered her treasure trove of recipes in 1946 while relatives were visiting her for a week. Five guests had brought along a Ouija board and urged Mrs. Van Maastricht to try it.

She sat at a table with her [illegible] and asked the spirit what [illegible] board questions. The board [illegible] answers the questions by [illegible] pointing to the words and letters [illegible] and the spirits at each [illegible] one or spelling out the words [illegible] ing letters printed on the gameboard's surface. "I didn't know what Mary Van Maastricht was up to the thing, so I [illegible]

"Before my husband died, my kids always [illegible] chocolate cookies and I added a few [illegible] chips. The [illegible] over the great chefs [illegible] Ouija board has been [illegible] and I can't think [illegible] better than [illegible]

[illegible] thought to [illegible] these [illegible] My pies have [illegible] and my recipes always [illegible] at the bake sales."

An added benefit of her new ghostly hobbies is that they appear to be exceptionally [illegible] and wholesome.

"My kids had allergies until I gave them the sugar-laden cakes and now they're much better," she said.

Tasty treats for Fall

From the shelves of [illegible] got after receiving from the Oldest Kids Mrs. Van Maastricht has selected a few of her favorites. Try them for a breakfast this week.

CHOCOLATE RASPBERRY CRUNCH

1 quart [illegible] part, slightly softened
2 cups granola cereal
1 quart chocolate [illegible] pa[illegible]

[illegible] cereal and [illegible] sugar for garnish.

Line bottoms of 9" springform pan with circle of waxed paper. Spoon a raspberry [illegible] jam over [illegible] granola on wax paper. Top pan with [illegible] granola mixture.

Spoon chocolate frozen yogurt over granola and spread evenly. Freeze [illegible] and thaw 1 hours.

STEAK THYME

2 Tbsps. fresh thyme leaves
1 tsp chopped parsley
2 Tbsps. olive oil
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper

Brush steaks with 1 tbsp. of the oil. Grill for approximate [illegible] broil on one side. Turn and brush with remaining oil. Finish cooking.

OUIJA SALSA

4 ripe papaya, peeled, seeded and cut in pieces
1 small red onion, chopped
2 Tbsps. lime juice
1 or 2 cilantro leaves
½ tsp. pepper
2 pears or apples thinly sliced

In food processor or blender process first five ingredients 7-10 seconds until coarsely chopped.

Serve Ouija salsa with pear or apple slices for dipping.

Was family murdered by a doll?

ABOVE: Murdered Chauvet family — Jocelyn, Catherine and Gilles Jacob.

POLICE photograph of doll with bloody hunting knife in hand, taken at crime scene.

EXPERTS believe the spirit of this dead man, Pierre Nemmo, inhabits the doll's body.

AVIGNON, France — A cute little doll named Pepe is the prime suspect in the vicious slasher slayings of a family of three.

And while it might sound ridiculous, homicide detectives and paranormal experts are looking into the possibility that the two-foot toy is a real life carbon copy of Chuckie, the killer toy of the Child's Play horror movies.

They have also speculated that the doll is possessed by the tortured spirit of a 5-year-old boy who murdered a playmate with a hunting knife back in 1921 — and is still stalking humans today.

"It sounds like something out of a horror movie. But it's serious — and real," Police Lt. Andre Pecol told reporters.

The victims were said to be God-fearing people. They lived in a quiet, peaceful neighborhood and had no enemies that we know of. But somebody, or something, stabbed them to death while they slept.

According to police, the grisly [illegible] murders of Maurice and Catherine Clement, both 37, and their 4-year-old daughter Marie took place on the weekend of July 21.

Nobody will ever know exactly what happened.

But neighbors reportedly heard blood-curdling screams and cries coming from the Clements' house around 10 p.m. and called police.

When officers arrived to investigate, they reportedly found the house locked tight. They were beginning to think [illegible] through the front door [illegible] a strange sight [illegible] the corpses. Rabid dog cured by ancient Chinese treatment!

ACUPUNCTURIST Dr. Ann Ling Yee

If at first you don't succeed, try, try something different. That's exactly what go-for-broke Chinese acupuncturist Ann Ling Yee did when a rabid pitchbred Alaskan malamute was brought to her clinic near Lexington, Ky. Knowing there is no known medicinal cure for rabies, the dog's owner brought his dog, Shakita, to Dr. Ling Yee in a desperate bid to save the pet's life. The acupuncture plan prohibited the muscle-triggered impulses that destroyed the killer disease before it reached the brain.

WOW! New gizmo lets you watch TV while you drive!

You may soon be able to watch TV while you've never watched it before — behind the wheel of your car!

Tinkerer Ray Schiff has just come up with AutoVision, a rolling hologram projector that beams TV images onto a multichrome steel mirror on your windshield. As you drive, the picture will appear to float in front of the car. So you can watch the road and still catch your favorite show.

Schiffman claims more than 100 drivers have road-tested the AutoVision. No accidents have been reported.

Mysterious hum is driving people stark raving MAD!

A mysterious mind-shattering hum that has slowly driven millions of anguished Europeans stark raving mad is now spreading its agonizing horror across America.

Victims in Europe have jumped from bridges and buildings, thrown themselves in front of trains and blown their brains out to escape the agonizing mental pain and horror of the nightmarish noise.

Scientists throughout the world have been working around the clock to find the source of the maddening sound, but their untiring efforts have been in vain.

"If we don't find out what's driving these people crazy, we could thousands of Americans could end up in insane asylums in the next year," said Dr. Hugo Steiner, a German specialist in sound research.

Residents in California, New Mexico, Texas, Utah, Wisconsin and Illinois have reported hearing the dangerous hum that robs them of precious sleep and saps their energy.

A team of scientists and engineers spent a week in Texas last month using sophisticated equipment to measure atomic, electromagnetic and seismic signals, but they failed to find the source of the hum.

Experts speculate the horrifying hum is caused by an

At least six million people have been driven crazy in Europe, Africa, China and India.

"The symptoms are always the same. Victims complain of severe headaches, a humming sound in their ears," Dr. Steiner explained. "Within hours, the young victims are like a mad dog, ripping huge chunks of hair out of her head. It looks like they want to put her in a straitjacket."

She prays the copper tapes will bring blessed relief from the unbearable hum — much the way copper bracelets are believed to alleviate the agony of arthritis.

"I pray to God every night my copper lined tapes will bring me peace from that dreadful hum that pierces my brain like a red hot poker."

Perplexed scientists admit they don't have the slightest idea what is causing the mind-splitting hum.

"America's mental hospitals will be overflowing unless we find some answers quick," Dr. Steiner said.

Millions of Americans are starving to death — for the RIGHT vitamins

. . . and don't know it!

By DAVID HILL / Correspondent

Your body can tell you when you're suffering from a vitamin or mineral deficiency, experts say.

And once you learn the body's warning signs, you can correct the nutritional deficiency and get back on the road to health.

"If you're like many Americans you're not giving your body the nutrients it needs — and as a result you're a target for all sorts of illness," says Dr. Allan Cott, an authority in the field of nutrition.

"Your body gives warning signs which tell what vitamins and minerals you're deficient in. By recognizing these signs, you can do something about it."

Two other nutrition experts Drs. Michael Lesser and Richard Brennan reveal exactly how to "read" the body's warning signs — and how you can correct common nutritional deficiencies.

Vitamin A deficiency — Warning signs. Deeply lodged lines in the fingernails, rough and dry skin, poor memory, irritability, sleeplessness, confusion. Deficiency can lead to lowered resistance to infections, night blindness and even permanent blindness.

Recommendation. Take a total of 25,000 units of vitamin A daily for one month and then add more fish liver oil, beef liver and carrots to your diet.

Vitamin B1 (thiamine) deficiency — Warning signs. An extensive sensitivity to sound, depression, occasional shooting pain in the calves. Deficiency can lead to serious nerve disorders, heart failure and muscle degeneration.

Recommendation. Take a B-complex pill containing 50 milligrams of thiamine each day, or three teaspoons of brewer's yeast daily and include liver and natural whole grains in your diet.

Vitamin B2 deficiency — Warning signs. Cracks in the corners of the mouth, skin problems, burning sensation in feet and hands, sensitivity to light. Deficiency can lead to anemia and poor vision.

Recommendation. Take a daily dose of three teaspoons of brewer's yeast or a B-complex pill and eat plenty of liver and natural whole grain products.

Vitamin B3 (niacin) deficiency - Warning signs. Sore and red tongue, bad breath, canker sores, depression, deficiency can lead to severe ment and calves' liver often, and take a daily B-complex pill.

Vitamin B6 deficiency — Warning signs. Tingling in fingers and toes, loss of hair, anemia, pains and cramps in the stomach and muscles. Deficiency can lead to stomach and nervous disorders.

Recommendation. Take a daily dose of three teaspoons of brewer's yeast along with a B-complex pill and include liver in your diet.

Vitamin C deficiency — Warning signs. Slow healing wounds, weakness, swollen gums, deep pressure in the tongue, dry mouth, low blood pressure and irritability in early childhood.

Recommendation. Eat citrus fruit and take 2,000 milligrams of vitamin C tablets every day.

Deficiency in calcium — Warning signs. Pains in the joints, cramps, cramps in arms and legs. Deficiency can lead to heart problems, weakened bones and osteoporosis.

Recommendation. Take a dolomite tablet daily and eat a diet rich in dairy products.

Magnesium deficiency — Warning signs. Tension, poor memory, deficiency can lead to mental problems and heart attack.

Recommendation. Take a daily magnesium supplement

Vitamin B12 deficiency — Warning signs. Tingling in fingers and toes, loss of appetite, anemia, pains and cramps in the stomach and muscles. Deficiency can lead to stomach and nervous disorders.

Recommendation. Take a daily dose of three teaspoons of brewer's yeast along with a B-complex pill and include liver in your diet.

Vitamin C deficiency — Warning signs. Slow healing wounds, weakness, swollen gums, deep pressure in the tongue, dry mouth, low blood pressure and irritability in early childhood.

Magnesium deficiency — Warning signs. Tension, poor memory, deficiency can lead to mental problems and heart attack.

Recommendation. Take a daily magnesium supplement

Iron deficiency — Warning signs. Weakness, irritability, brittle nails, deficiency can lead to anemia.

Recommendation. Take a multi-vitamin that is supplemented with iron and eat more liver and red meats.

"If you notice any of these warning signs do something about it right away — before deficiencies in vitamins and minerals rob you of a normal life," said Dr. Allan Cott, a noted psychiatrist who is an expert — nutrition.

"There is no truer saying than 'You are what you eat.' With a nutritionally sound diet you can lead a healthy life."

The body's cells need a broad natural base of nutrients, said Dr. Richard Brennan. He explained that vitamins and minerals must work together to maintain a healthy body.

Dr. Michael Lesser, a pioneer in the field of nutrition therapy for mental illness and author of the book "Nutrition and Vitamin Therapy" said, "If you can learn the body's warning signals, you can correct your vitamin and mineral deficiencies."

HOW TO LIE ABOUT YOUR AGE

It's easy to shave years off your age once you learn the ground rules. In this special excerpt from the best-selling book How to Lie About Your Age, authors Sona Holman and Lillian Friedman reveal the secret to becoming younger overnight — simply by hiding your real age.

QUIZ! Can you name Tommy Aames' played Matt Dillon in Gunsmoke?

. . . and get away with it!

You can lie about your age and get away with it — if you follow certain suggestions.

The secret of successful lying is knowing what to recall and what to forget on all the areas of interest and trivia that ordinarily pop-per your conversation.

If you're shaving several years off your life, make sure that you know the fashions, fads, songs, etc., that are part of your made up memory of your new assumed age. And don't be greedy about taking off too many years. If you're 54 and you pass for 47, don't go to 42. On the other hand, a youthful looking 70 year old might easily drop 10 years.

Here are some tips to help avoid having your cover blown.

● Edit dated slang from your speech. It's a dead give away. Listen to yourself and eliminate words like "groovy," "hairy," "far out" and "here comes de judge."

Once you've dropped the passe speech, you can relax. There's no need to acquire the comparable jargon of your new age group. In fact, there's a risk of guiling it wrong if you try. While you're struggling to be a swinger, the expression may go out of style. With slang missing from your conversation, you'll appear timeless and your speech will gain in color and precision.

● Adjust the ages of family members in your own age.

● Move your high school and college yearbooks from the living room shelves to out of your bedroom closets.

● Stop using your driver's license to establish your identity when cashing checks, charging purchases or opening bank accounts.

● Forget obscure events and personalities prior to your alleged earliest recollection. even if they were widely known at the time.

● Forget how obsolete objects felt to use. Talk about what it felt like to ride in a "woody" station wagon and you're either an antique car buff or older than you say.

● Forget dated nouns. It's a refrigerator or fridge, not an icebox.

● Forget that you saw any movie that happens to be more than five years old anyplace but on TV.

● Forget about the book series that you may have read as a child unless they were Nancy Drew, to be memorial. Talk about children's classics instead.

● Forget the names of advertised products that no longer exist — Cocomalt or Ovaltine.

● Forget the names of candies that are no longer around. Get penny candy. Mount pounds of cubies and add three pints out of your conversation.

'Never admit you saw The Beatles on the Ed Sullivan Show!'

You're bound to goof now and again. When you do, don't panic. Establish a few reliable fallback positions. For example:

● You played tonight one at a flea market last week.

● You learned it from the definition in a crossword puzzle.

● You saw it on a TV documentary.

● You read it somewhere.

● You're a nostalgia buff.

● Or invent a story precisely your actual age. All of your favorite stories and recollections can be attributed to

Wacky Hindus hold frog wedding to end drought!

SUPERMOM: MY 15 BABIES ARE DOING GREAT!

INSTANT FAMILY! Weekly World News reported on Nadya Suleman and her 14 babies on August 10

By H. HEALY LIND

Proud mom Nadya Suleman is doing fine, and so are the healthy babies she gave birth to five months ago — all 15 of them!

Nadya Suleman, Weekly World News broke the story of her octuplet birth in our August 10 issue. Thousands of letters have poured in to our offices. Asking how Nadya and her 14 tots are doing.

We're all doing great! The octuplets — Isaiah, Josiah, Caleb, Jeremiah, Elijah, Ezekiel, Gideon, Noah, Adam, Zion, Amariah and Aaliyah — are healthy and growing like weeds.

Nadya says she's grateful that her quints is quintuplets all babies are all.

Shortly after news of her blessed event broke, the world congratulations started pouring in from everywhere. Nadya and her 14 precious babies have received thousands of cards, letters and gifts.

We're so grateful for their help in the course of a single week. We have to go through [illegible] gallons of formula and 100 packs of baby wipes!

Nadya's plan is caring for 15 babies is astounding but says she doesn't mind a bit.

"Sure it's hard sometimes," she says. "But I don't know what I'd do if all my quints were not here. What used to be just [illegible] now is a great memory.

"And both of us get up and down all night feeding and cuddling the babies.

"But when I see those little faces looking up at me, it's all worth the effort. I wouldn't trade it for the world."

Police chief hires cannibals to patrol city

By KEVIN K. CRSED
Special correspondent

The crime rate in Rome, Italy, has dropped a whopping 42 percent since police recruited a group of foreigners to serve on the force — a tribe of savage cannibals!

Police Chief Vittorio Pugno brought 17 man-eating Mgurtos over from Brazil's Amazon jungle last January when crime reached an all time high.

"We needed to get the job done," says Chief Pugno, who learned of the tribe when he took a goodwill trip to Brazil back in 1987. "The Mgurtos are natural-born hunters. They've got great instincts and once they start in pursuit of a man they never give up."

The savages agreed to take the work because their homes in the rain forest were being destroyed by the lumber industry. In exchange for coming over to Italy, the warriors have been given a reward to stay in, a meager salary and unlimited dental care, as the Mgurtos consider their teeth to be their most sacred possession.

Since then, they've made a whopping 741 arrests and virtually cleaned up the once crime-ravaged city.

Before the Mgurtos came, burglary, robbery and gang-related murders were everyday occurrences on the streets of Rome.

Now, it's not uncommon to see would-be crime czars cowering in fear, being led away to jail by half-naked whooping primitives shaking spears and gnashing their teeth.

"They have uncanny crime-fighting skills," says Chief Pugno. "Once, we were looking for clues at a murder scene. A Mgurto came in, sniffed the air, reached down and picked up a sliver of blood-stained cloth smaller than a pinhead. It was used as evidence to convict the killer.

"Another time, a bank robber was holding a teller at gunpoint. My men were afraid to shoot for fear of hitting the hostage. Suddenly one of our Mgurtos shot a poison arrow criminal is foolish enough to try to get away on foot. The Mgurtos can run all day and never get tired."

Chief Pugno refused to comment on a controversy surrounding the disappearance of four criminals taken into custody by the Mgurtos.

"There's no truth to rumors that the four had been eaten. They were simply given stern warnings that frightened them out of town."

Several citizens are praising Pugno as the Mgurtos continue to make arrests. "Since they've started patrolling our BLOOD-CRAZED beast continues his merciless attack on Amedeo, chomping on his abdomen and his thigh, nearly severing his leg.

Amazing Amedeo Gerardi was the world's greatest lion tamer till August 6, the fateful day one of his favorite cats went crazy — and gnawed him to death in front of 3,000 stunned spectators!

At first, unsuspecting circusgoers thought it was all part of the act as frantic Amedeo wrestled with a snarling lion named Poulin during an opening-night performance in Versailles, France.

But then the band stopped in mid-flourish and terrified ringmaster Gilles Ericlint rushed into the cage, flailing wildly at the blood-crazed beast.

And all at once, the big top crowd realized the normally lighthearted lion tamer was in a desperate battle for his life — a battle he was destined to lose.

"The people were laughing and applauding and having a wonderful time, and then suddenly the crowd went stone silent," recalled heartsick circus worker Philippe Coulouris. "The lion spectacle began as courageous Amedeo, in a cage surrounded by five ferocious cats, tried to climb on Poulin's back as the animal stood on two pedestals.

For some reason, the hundred-lb. lion tamer lost his footing and tumbled back into the sawdust — and in a flash, Poulin's jungle instincts took over.

The big cat — suddenly 450 pounds of uncontrollable fury — sank his fangs into Amedeo's right hand.

The terrified trainer beat at Poulin's head with his stick, then deftly threw the stick away and used his free hand to force the brutal beast's jaws open. "Amedeo got his hand out of the cat's mouth, but then Poulin began chomping on his abdomen and thigh," the rattled ringmaster recalled.

"An attendant named Dany Bens and I went into the cage and finally managed to get Poulin off him, but by then he was bleeding very badly. One leg was bitten almost completely through."

Despite his gaping wounds, the shaken showman got to his feet, smiled feebly at the crowd and walked from the cage under his own power.

But once outside, brave Amedeo collapsed in a coma — never to regain consciousness.

"Everyone told him that one day those cats would kill him," a distraught Bens said later. "But he swore they'd never harm him because he loved them — and he thought they loved him."
